

Memory of the Good Old Days

The shoes of many roam my halls, each with a different step.

The short & tall all stride with a pride of their own.

Through my walls I've heard it all, the gossip, the rumors, the sad, the lonely . . .

Sometimes I'd wish I could tell them all to not let their heart-ache make them fall.

I've seen many come and go, and now I know I miss those who have gone.

I may only be a building, but as a high school,

I'm the most remembered building of all.
